

JOIN THE NAUTIC FORCE!

Surrounded by damp darkness and the bone-chilling cold of an unrelenting current, the acrid smell of salt as your only companion. You have long been accustomed to this dreary loneliness and lull yourself into the melancholy of being, before you are thrown into the cold water by the harsh voice of Timothy, as soon as the melody fades away inside you. A seductive depth from which no rescue can be expected in the near future.

Provided, of course, that you want to be rescued, because when Storm Seeker invites you to become part of their Nautic Force for an evening, only deaf ears can resist their call and Fabi's clear voice. Surrounded by the unusual sounds of hurdy-gurdy and flutes, the band is not only able to tell of the dangers and longings of seafaring. They spread such a rapturous mood of celebration as only those who have to reckon with not returning from their adventures on the high seas can.

When Storm Seeker boards the stage ship, there is no compromise: Either you withstand the current or you are mercilessly washed away.

” You don't even have to hear the whole song for it to be stuck in your head, it's that catchy. ”

- moshville.co.uk

Storm Seeker

ABOUT

FABI

Hurdy-Gurdy
Recorder & Vocals

UGHAR

Keyboards

TIMOTHY

Lead Vocals
Bass

Like every band story, the legend of Storm Seeker begins in a stuffy, dark basement. Near the almost forgotten docks of the former Hanseatic city of Neuss, the brothers Timothy and Olaf managed to hire a crew in 2013 that would later become Storm Seeker. After three years of drifting on shallow waters, coming together and drifting apart, the EP Pirate Scum, released in 2016, hit like a cannonball. Accordingly, it didn't take long to embark on the first great voyage across the vast seas of live performances. And Storm Seeker didn't just stay in domestic waters with over 50 gigs! Besides the legendary gigs at the Dong Open Air and the MetalDays in Slovenia, they were able to gain their first experience in foreign climes with gigs in Switzerland and Italy.

The storm that the five-piece crew is looking for by name, however, was to be a blessing. After a line-up change that washed Fabi on deck, the debut album Beneath in the Cold was released in May 2019 and drew the hoped-for response: starting with a revue at the Dong Open Air, Storm Seeker moved from port to port in the summer of 2019 - and even after the festival season, the foray didn't end. In spring 2020, Storm Seeker switched to NoCut Entertainment and celebrated this triumph with several support acts for Monolinc. And even if the sea seemed particularly stormy in 2020, making mooring in familiar ports impossible, Storm Seeker did not become shipwrecked and found a way to navigate the unfamiliar waters. And after all, in addition to participating in the Online Musik Festival - the first of its kind - and increasing their YouTube presence, this allowed the crew to plan their next foray.

So the seven seas may tremble again, because after the successful second album Guns Don't Cry, as well as the acoustic album Calm Seas Vol. 1, which followed in 2022, Storm Seeker are finally setting sail again. With a reinforced crew in the form of Paulie on guitar they have already conquered the stages of Wacken Open Air and Rockharz Festival in 2022. Now they're coming for more, with up their sleeves.

» STORM SEEKER seems to continuously deliver the appropriate voice for the occasion, and this is equally true through the musical instrumentation. «

PAULIE

Guitars

OLAF

Drums

NEW ALBUM

Nautic Force
out 28th April 2023